This chronology demonstrates the entwining of American military history with American political history from the era of voyages of discovery (when European monarchs vied for North American colonies) through the U.S.' post 9/11 ventures in the Middle East. In four volumes, 11 sections are devoted to a major time period and trace the interplay of the military and the political. An overview essay provides context for the incident-by-incident reports of relevant events in each period. This includes events such as the Treaty of Paris ending the Revolutionary War; the clash of the ironclad ships Virginia and Monitor in 1862; the Battle of the Little Bighorn; the destruction of the USS Maine in Havana's harbor; the assassination of Franz Ferdinand in Sarajevo; the Doolittle raid over Tokyo in 1942; the Six-Day War in 1967; the fall of Saigon in April 1975; and the invasion of Iraq in 2003. These stand out in stark relief amid the thousands of military, diplomatic, and political incidents chronicled over more than five centuries. Sidebar articles describe significant weapons and technologies, profile American and Native American military leaders, map battles, and reprint excerpts from landmark documents (e.g., an account of the Boston Tea Party; Lee's report to Jefferson Davis on the Battle of Gettysburg; Woodrow Wilson's "The Fourteen Points" address to Congress; Eisenhower's "Order of the Day" for June 6, 1944; George W. Bush's "Axis of Evil" speech). This excellent set offers more comprehensive coverage and describes each event in greater detail than John Fredriksen's Chronology of American Military History (2010). Although other almanacs and chronologies devoted to specific wars expand on this set's coverage, this chronology will serve students well, especially in libraries that lack Fredriksen's or that require more granular detail. --James Rettig
