ISLAM, PEACE AND SOCIAL JUSTICE: A CHRISTIAN PERSPECTIVE BY A. CHRISTIAN VAN GORDER PDF

Our world is fraught with horrific expressions of violence and injustice, which are often justified by religious rhetoric. 'Islam, Peace, and Social Justice: A Christian Perspective' is a relevant, comprehensive, and empathetic examination of some of these social-justice challenges within the Muslim world. Sadly, many non-Muslims only learn about Muslim views on social-justice issues from biased and inaccurate media portrayals. This book, written by a non-Muslim friend of Muslims, offers a more sympathetic and nuanced treatment, focusing especially on points of convergence and divergence between Islam and Christianity and exploring ways in which social-justice partnerships can be forged between adherents of these two great faith traditions. The book is filled with concrete and specific examples - often quoting directly from the Qur'an and the Bible as well as the newspaper - and is practical in its approach rather than loftily sermonic. The work seeks above all to foster more substantive and constructive contexts of interfaith dialogue and action for the purposes of addressing injustice.

A field in need of its masterpiece

By Rumi & Company

One of the rare works on Islam and Social Justice. The field is practically empty. I would suggest it to people who want to start learning about the subject from a Christian perspective. It is also good about compiling the verses from relating to social justice.

There was one minor mistake about a reference given to Fazlur Rahman. The reference given to Fazlur Rahman was not the prominent UofChicago Prof Fazlur Rahman, it was another person yet the author seems to missed that.

Other prominent works people can consult with are available by R. Shah-Kazemi and Colin Turner.
