The Power of a Story:

Stories are an ancient way to transmit wisdom. They have the fantastic power to invoke a primal past, to impart a mythic dimension to our contemporary lives, to speak in the symbolic language of dreams, and to spark our prophetic imagination in creative ways that logic, law, and theory are simply incapable of achieving. Stories re-enchant our world.

Sometimes a story is the easiest way to impart a profound idea in the simplest form. This is because a story has a special method of entering into our consciousness in order to impart essential information in a non-intrusive manner. When one person tells another what to do, the natural defenses of the ego instinctively arise in resistance to the information that is being imparted. But a story has a more gentle and roundabout way of entering into our psyche without being noticed. At first the underlying message of the story is planted like a seed in the soil of our subliminal subconscious; but slowly the teaching of the tale begins to blossom and bloom within the clear light of our conscious mind. In due time, the story can help us wake up to what is true and real in our lives. From within our near comatose state of spiritual slumber we can be so resistant to being woken up that only a story can sneak past our defense mechanisms in order to really wake us up.

The purpose of these stories is to wake us up. Some of them will surprise us, some will jolt us, some will seem oddly familiar, and others completely archaic and obscure. Yet, with the help of the accompanying commentary, the hope and prayer is that each story will impart a novel life lesson and serve to wake us up in some sense; pushing us all to go a little bit deeper, to move a little bit further along the path of our soul's journey.

mystic tales of Emek Hamelech brings the deepest teachings of the Ari'zl into our hearts and souls.

I have learned with Rav Dovber Pinson for ten years and have read nearly all of his books and listened to hundreds of his Talmud and KABBALAH teachings. Reading and absorbing Mystic tales of the Emek Hamelech was and continues to be a transformative experience for me. Through beautifully told stories taken from the Kabbalistic book Emek HaMelech, Rav Pinson then brings them alive through deep and accessible commentaries for each story. I felt transported back to 16th century Tsfat and visualized sitting by the Ari'zl feet learning from him. THE content is matched by a beautifully produced book, with heavy bond paper used to match the weight of the teachings.

Written from the holy city of tsfat, Ephraim Mordechai HaKohain
