5 stars only because I can't give 20

By David

This book delivers precisely what the title promises. I try to read this book every 5 years, or less, to see what I missed the last time I read it. This is a book that should be mandatory both in high school, and college. The post WW I generation of the German speaking world produced some very good thinkers, including many of those who shaped Quantum Mechanics, though history has allowed Adolf and crew to overshadow them. I had the privilege of sitting in on Rudolf Arnheim's lectures, in college. Visual Thinking: Thirty-Fifth Anniversary Printing His prose was extremely clear, and like a lake with no turbulence, one could see to the point, or bottom of the lake, metaphorically, with great clarity. This book should never be updated, it is so valuable as is. It is an adventure in thinking, as surely as the Anabasis (The Persian Expedition) was an adventure. In scope, for its subject, I could compare this book to Lifetide, for Biology. It is not merely dry parts, it is the 5 blind men of Hindustan suddenly getting their sight, and seeing the elephant for the first time. The Seven Mysteries of Life is another book that must have taken 20 years of gathering, to write. If the Next Whole Earth Catalogs were still around, this book would be cited, in its subject area, as one of the top 3, if not the best. This book, along with Art of Readable Writing, are something that everyone who communicates with language would find useful. I send books to colleges in the third world, out of my own pocket. Since Surface Mail ended, this is now expensive, even in flat rate boxes, so I only send very high value books. This is a book I send. If more Germans had thought this way, in the '30's, Hitler and crew would not have gained power. The checklists for solving problems, at p. 118 and 148 in my edition, is remarkably useful. NLP practitioners don't use all these questions. This book is about clear perception, doing for thinking and problem-solving what Tracking and the Art of Seeing: How to Read Animal Tracks and Sign does for tracking. If I had to teach high school with only 10 books, this would be one of the 10.
